Farmingdale State's $1 Billion Impact on the Region

► Farmingdale Has $1 Billion Economic Impact, Says LIA

Farmingdale State College has emerged as an increasingly important economic engine for Long Island region and New York State, generating a $1.1 billion economic impact and creating more than 10,000 jobs over the last decade. Farmingdale's direct operating and capital expenditures during this period caused Long Island earnings to increase by an estimated $354 million and created more than 10,000 secondary jobs throughout the economy.

Those are among the key findings of a study—"Fueling the Long Island Economy: The Regional Impact of Farmingdale State College"—conducted by the Long Island Association, the largest business and advocacy organization in the region. The LIA studied the College's four major operating units—the state purchase budget, the Economic Opportunity Center, the residence
